

Office employees ditch office attire for full fashion this Emancipation

Aegis continues to reinforce cultural unity and teamwork to push forward in T&T.

On Thursday, staff of business outsourcing company, Aegis Business Solutions came together at their Port of Spain office in full fashion to celebrate and give recognition to our Emancipation in Trinidad and Tobago. Since the company's inception, Aegis continues to encourage employees to ditch their office attire and opt for a traditional dress for work to celebrate. However this was their first employee led fashion show. From the Directors to security staff, everyone played a key role in showcasing their individuality and team unity.

Joanne Prescott from Aegis Accounting Outsourcing says, "This was more than just a fun show after work, it was a great demonstration of our creativity and team work at the company as it was our co-workers putting on a show in support of our heritage."

The company marks 15 years in business this year and continues to encourage staff to work together to celebrate and be proud of our Trinbagonian culture and heritage. "With what is happening in our world and in our country, we need this more now than ever before," says Prescott.
